

An introductory note from Daniel C. Peterson

Dr. Robert Joseph, of New Zealand's University of Waikato, is currently in the United States as a visiting Fulbright scholar. On 5 August 2017, he spoke to a group of volunteers, authors, and supporters assembled for the dinner hosted annually by the Interpreter Foundation—which happened, also, to be a celebration of Interpreter's fifth birthday. In his remarks, Dr. Joseph addressed the subject of "Maori Responses to the Mormon Church." With his kind permission and through the efforts of Tom Pittman and Russell Richins, we are pleased to make a video of his presentation available to a wider audience.
