

The Interpreter Foundation offers its journal, *Interpreter: A Journal of Mormon Scripture*, in a number of different formats. One of those formats is the offprint series. Each of the articles published in the journal is available for ordering in hard copy print individually through the services of our print-on-demand partner MagCloud.

To order an individual article in hard copy, simply click the last icon on the right-hand side of any article where it says "Order Print." This will take you to the MagCloud website where you may proceed to order a professionally printed and bound hard copy of that individual article that will be shipped to your door. These vary in price from a few dollars to up to ten dollars, depending on the length of the article, which covers the cost of printing and shipping only, without any markup or royalty.

This offprint edition of the articles is available immediately after an article is published. Of course, each volume is also available in a professionally printed and bound paperback edition as well, and is a compilation of all articles in the volume. This becomes available for ordering a few weeks after a volume is completed, on Amazon.com (or AmazonSmile). The price for these also only covers cost of printing and shipping, without any markup or royalty.

Please let us know if you have any questions about our offprint series.
